

Scholarships – your gift makes a difference

Since Sweden introduced fees for students from outside the EEA in 2011, it has become more difficult for international students to study at Lund University. This jeopardises Lund University's global classroom. By contributing to scholarships to talented students, you support them and the competitiveness of Lund University.

Lund University is ranked as one of the world's top higher education institutions. Students from all over the world apply to study here. It is precisely our strong international profile – regarding both research and education – that is one of our main characteristics.

Scholarships can be absolutely crucial to the opportunity for international students to study at Lund University. For close to 350 years, our good reputation within education and research has attracted the most talented students, both nationally and internationally.

The University currently attracts more international students than any other Swedish university. The international students who come to Lund for their Master's degrees contribute new ideas, boundary-crossing perspectives and make both the University and the city of Lund into an attractive and creative place which appeals to the best talents.

Many study programmes require a global classroom – the very programme design is based on the presence of students from different parts of the world. International students also serve as good ambassadors of Lund University. We need to prepare our students for a global world. Working for a global company often requires knowledge and a network of contacts.

A scholarship can make a huge difference to students who have difficulties financing their studies abroad. Your commitment and support will contribute to making it possible for Swedish and international students to flourish in a global and complex society.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO?

By donating to scholarships for students paying tuition fees, you can make a significant contribution to changing the lives of these students.
